There are of course several additional shops of various sorts located throughout the area – those listed above are simply among the largest and most notable.

If you're in the mood to shop for something other than essentials and necessities, you'll find several options in and around the area. The Merritt Square Mall (literally just minutes away from Cocoa Beach and Port Canaveral) features several of the usual suspects, (including both department and specialty stores), a food court, and a movie theater. The Banana River Square is a nifty little plaza filled with smaller locally owned specialty shops, casual snack spots, and few of the areas best places to pick up necessities (including a Publix grocery store). Cocoa Village (located in downtown Cocoa) is a bit off the beaten path but an excellent choice for those who prefer charming boutiques, specialty shops, and an eclectic mix of casual and upscale dining options in a quaint historic setting. Antique shops, arts and crafts, and gourmet food shops (among others) can be found throughout this very inviting spot. You can't say you've truly shopped in Cocoa Beach without stopping at the Ron Jon Surf Shop or the Cocoa Beach Surf Company - both located in the heart of Cocoa Beach. Each features 2 floors of beachwear, sun and surf wear, surf gear, skate gear, surf boards, skim boards, beach toys, beach towels, and so much more! The Quiet Flight Surf Shop is filled with surf and skate gear too – their selection of surf and skate brand clothes is notable - different than anywhere else around (and far different from what you'll find at the mall).
